

Dragana Nikitovic is an Assistant Professor at the School of Medicine, University of Crete (UOC) in Heraklion, Greece. She earned BSc in Biochemistry from the Faculty of Natural Sciences, University of Belgrade, Belgrade, Serbia in 1992, and earned a half-time PhD diploma in Department of Medical Biochemistry and Biophysics, Karolinska Institute, Stockholm, Sweden in 1998 as well as Doctor of Medical Sciences degree (PhD) from the Medical School, UOC in 2008. Dr Nikitovic is co-author of 90 original publications or reviews and 5 book chapters. She has acted as Editor and Reviewer for numerous International Peer Journals and was member of congress organizing committees. Her research interest are the in the areas: Matrix Biology, Tumor Biology and Signal Transduction, Disease Markers, Molecular Targets, Inflammation, Biological Testing, Cytotoxicity. Emphasis is given to extracellular matrix components signalling and especially to their implication in tumorigenesis and inflammation.